Brief Report: The webinar was organised by History Association KAALNIDHI, Dept. Of History, Shyama Prasad Mukherji College For the Women (University of Delhi).

The guest speaker Syed Farid Ahmed introduced the concept of archives to the students. The evolution of archives, debates and discussion on relevance of archives were discussed. The speaker discussed the importance of Archives and how the historical material preserved in archives are used to understand history in a scientific way. Archives are important because they provide evidence of activities and tell us more about individuals and institutions.

It was highlighted that researchers and others who consult archives for information and knowledge increasingly recognize the importance of primary sources preserved there. The records kept there help in understanding the past with authenticity. The speaker said, all archival sources are at once primary and secondary sources, neither raw nor fully cooked, but both archival records and history-in-the making.

Archives are crucial as they increase our sense of identity and understanding of cultures. Further, the various acts related to Archives were discussed. The concept of state archives and national archives were also introduced to the students. He broadly discussed Portuguese, Dutch and French commercial enterprises and archives during the British period. He also discussed the facts about functional units of Archives.

Towards the end, the speaker discussed the various career opportunities available with National Archives of India and other state archives.

Overall the webinar was beneficial and interactive.

Brief Report: The webinar was organised by KAALNIDHI, History Association, Department of History, Shyama Prasad Mukherji College For Women (University of Delhi). The topic of discussion was Indian Museums in Colonial Milieu. Museums are crucial part of representation of our history and culture. The speaker started with tracing the historical background of the museums. He pointed out that the curio-cabinates in Europe were the proto-museums or the earlier form of museums. However, it was during the 19th century that the museums became popular and endeavours were made towards developing them in Britain and its colonies. These museums collect and preserve objects and materials of cultural, historical and religious value. The museums promote our cultural heritage. Indian museums are colonial construct. Tracing the 1851 exhibition, the speaker highlighted that India was given one of the largest pavilions and attempt was made to show that India had a static culture and economy. However, Indian pavilion attracted huge attraction and appreciation.

The students were familiarised with the Indian museum, Kolkata, concept of college museums, provincial museums, site museums, archaeological museums and so on. The crucial contributions by Cunningham, Curzon, Marshall, Prince of Wales, Jamshedji Tata, etc were discussed. Thereafter some of the problems which these museums faced and are still facing were highlighted. It was stressed that museums that disseminate information through visual and oral means can be turned into very useful instruments for elevating awareness among the masses about the significance of all matters of existence.

Overall, the webinar was beneficial as this theme is part of the syllabus too. It was an interactive and engaging webinar. Students understood the various dimensions and perspectives of museum during the colonial period.
